

TOP SECRET

ANNEX D-1

EXCERPT FROM FOURTEENTH MEETING OF ANCICC (PAGE 7, PARAGRAPH 3)

Section III - New Items

Exchange of CI Information Between SSA and NSA - Section III, Item 2

Colonel Corderman recalled that the Navy's initial request for CI bulletins had been made to Major Snow of MIS; that a subsequent request had been addressed to him; and that his reply had stated that the whole CI problem required looking into. He added that this was part of the general question of Army-Navy collaboration, and that General Clarke had a statement of policy, prepared by General Bissell which he would like to present. This document, copies of which were distributed to all members, reads as follows:

"STATEMENT OF POLICY REGARDING COLLABORATION BETWEEN
ARMY AND NAVY IN THE COMMUNICATION INTELLIGENCE FIELD
ENUNCIATED BY THE ARMY-NAVY COMMUNICATION
INTELLIGENCE BOARD

1. All basic agreements, actual or implied, now in force between the U.S. Army and the British, the U.S. Navy and the British and the U.S. Army and the U.S. Navy, shall continue in effect until terminated by the parties thereto.
2. No new basic cryptanalytic agreements, actual or implied, shall be made by the Army or by the Navy with the British or any other foreign government or any other agency of the United States Government unless the service involved first submits the matter for discussion to ANCIB.
3. The Army and Navy shall confine their respective cryptanalytic activities to those presently allocated by joint agreement of the Army, Navy, and FBI, dated 30 June 1942.
4. All reallocations of cryptanalytic responsibilities as between the Army and Navy shall be made by this Board. Pending such reallocations, neither service shall encroach upon the fields of cryptanalytic activities of the other.
5. Any and all technical information in all branches of cryptology and cryptanalytics shall be fully, freely, and voluntarily exchanged between the Army and Navy. Authorized representatives of the two services shall have free and complete access to the agencies and materials of the other on a basis of complete reciprocity. Each service will take precautions to respect the decisions of the other with respect to technical completed.

Army, Navy and NSA review(s)

~~TOP SECRET~~
TOP SECRET

ANNEX D-1 (Cont'd.)

data not to be disclosed to the British. Each service recognizes, however, that the other may be required under existing commitments to disclose to the British information derived in part from data which the other service has provided.

6. Any differences in policy will be reconciled by ANCIB to the end that a common post-war policy will be adopted by the Army and Navy.